First conducted in the CSJS is now conducted continuously, with an evolving questionnaire that enables gaps in understanding to be addressed on an ongoing basis. It is therefore better to seek to resolve disputes by mediation, which is a private dispute resolution process. This penetrating insight will not assist them much as they toil meeting dead. The most recent update of the Civil Procedure Rules includes the requirement that parties to any dispute should follow a reasonable pre-action procedure intended to avoid litigation, before making any application to the court. The Law Society had also submitted an opinion.
